

SPANISH VERB - PONER CONJUGATION

Pon de tu parte: among Colombian people, this expression is used when we want to tell someone to collaborate and make an effort in something.

The verb poner is one of the most common verbs in the Spanish Language. This means to take a thing and put it over a place. This verb can have many meanings depending on the expression/context we use it in. In English, the verb put is used in several circumstances, the same as in Spanish, and its meaning will be different in each particular situation. , This verb is also used when we wear clothing. For example; “me puse un pantalón rojo” (I’m wearing red pants) but also can mean to contribute with something like in “tu pones la comida y yo la bebida” (I bring the food, and you get the drinks).

Some of these expressions are:

- Poner buena cara: make a good face despite the circumstances.
- Poner algo en juego: to put something or someone at risk.
- Poner a alguien en su sitio: make someone take his place.
- Poner trabas: make obstacles, make something more difficult.
- Poner los cuernos a alguien: being unfaithful to your couple.
- Poner atención: be attentive to something or someone; pay attention. Some people also say ‘prestar atención’.

Let’s learn together!

Before you continue reading, remember:

- You in English refers to the second-person singular and plural. However, in Spanish, we have 3 important pronouns: tú, usted, and ustedes. Tú is used when you have confidence with the person you are talking to, usted is more formal, and ustedes is the second person’s plural form.
- In Spanish, we have unspoken subjects (sujeto tácito) so there is no need to use a pronoun every time as we do in English. It is a form of subject ellipsis that occurs in this language. We also use written accents and stresses that may change a word’s meaning when written.
- Poner is one of the irregular verbs that exist in Spanish.

Let's see some of the most used perfect tenses of the Indicative Mood:

- We build compounded tenses using the verb “HABER” (HAVE) and the participle of the main verb, in this case poner: puesto*.

SPANISH VERB - PONER CONJUGATION

*Note: puesto as a noun means a place somewhere, a shop or location: un puesto de verduras (a vegetable store)

- We use the compounded perfect preterit to talk about something that has happened since a certain time, but its meaning can change according to how we use it: él me ha puesto los cuernos 3 veces (he has been unfaithful with me 3 times).
- We use the pluperfect to talk about something it had already happened before an action developed in the past: cuando me llamaste, yo ya me había puesto el pantalón (when you called me, I had already worn my pants).
- We use the perfect future to talk about a fact or something we hope to happen in the future: en la tarde ya habremos puesto el cuadro en la pared (we will have already put the frame on the wall).
- We use perfect conditional to talk about something that is hypothetical with a result to that hypothesis: si la hubieras querido, no le habrías puesto los cuernos (if you had loved her, you wouldn't have been unfaithful with her).

As you know, in Spanish, we also have two other verbal moods: the Subjunctive and the Imperative Mood.

Let's see the common forms of the Subjunctive Mood:

The subjunctive mood is one of the grammatical modes of the verb and is used to express possible, desired, or hypothetical actions, that is, actions that are not actually occurring.
