

CONJUGATION OF SPANISH VERB - SERVIR

The verb “servir” is widely used among Spanish native speakers, this can have two meanings; one being to work or being useful, and the other when we want to talk about bringing food to the table. In English, this verb is used similar to “to serve”.

Also, this is commonly used in the expression “no sirve para nada” (is useless), that we use when we intend to say in a rude way that someone or something is not contributing with anything.

Let's learn together!

Before you continue reading, don't forget the following statements.

- “You” is a pronoun which has different meanings. However, in Spanish we have 3 important pronouns: tú, usted, ustedes. “Tú” is used when you have confidence with the person you are talking to, “usted” is more formal and “ustedes” is used when talking to more than one person, formal or informal.
- In Spanish, we have unspoken subjects, so it is not needed to use a pronoun every time as we do in English.
- We use written accents in Spanish, be careful! Or you will have miscommunication problems in your writing.

Let's read together the following examples:

- Yo sirvo un vaso de agua.
- Tú serviste la comida.
- Tu computador no servía/ tu computador no servirás/ tu computador no serviría.
- Nosotros serviremos al presidente.
- Los materiales no servirían.

These are some examples of phrases in the Indicative Mode of this important verb

Do you recognize these tenses?

- We use the perfect preterit to talk mainly about a functionality that doesn't exist anymore, or to say that someone has served the table. For example: el martillo no sirvió (the hammer didn't work).
- We use the imperfect preterit to talk about a habitual function that we do not know with certainty when it ceased to function. For example: los computadores no sirvieron (computers didn't work).
- We use the future simple to communicate that something will have a function in a future time: estas manzanas servirán para hacer un rico pastel (these apples will be useful to make a delicious cake).
- We use the simple conditional tense to express the functionality that someone or something would probably have: tú servirías las comida (you would serve the dinner).

Let's see some of the most used perfect tenses of the Indicative Mode:

- We build compounded tenses using the verb "HABER" (HAVE) and the past participle of the main verb, in this case servir -> servido.
 - We use the compounded perfect preterit to express the function something has had since a determinate time. For example: este auto ha servido desde hace muchos años (this car has worked since many years ago).
 - We use the pluperfect to talk about the functionality something had before an action developed in the past: Antes de romperse, había servido de mesa por un tiempo (before it was broken, it had served as a table for some time).
 - We use the perfect future to express that something will have probably had a function after a certain time. For example: después de terminar, nuestro esfuerzo habrá servido de algo (after finishing, our effort will have worked for something).
- However, this tense is more commonly used to talk about situations that probably could have happened or to make suppositions. For example: supongo que habrán servido la comida (I guess you will have served the food).

- We use perfect conditional to talk about the consequence of an action that could have happened: si tuviera mis tijeras, habrían servido para cortar el cable (if I had my scissors, those would have been useful to cut the cable).

As you already know, in Spanish we also have two other verbal modes: the subjunctive and the imperative mode

Let's see the common forms of the Subjunctive Mode:

Subject	Present	Imperfect preterit	Pluperfect	Perfect Preterit
Yo (I)	Sirva	Sirviera	Hubiera servido	Haya servido
Tú (you)	Sirvas	Sirvieras	Hubieras servido	Hayas servido
Él (he) / ella (she) / usted (you: formal)	Sirva	Sirviera	Hubiera servido	Haya servido
Nosotros (we)	Sirvamos	Sirviéramos	Hubiéramos servido	Hayamos servido
Ustedes (you: plural) / ellos (they: masculine) / ellas (they: feminine)	Sirvan	Sirvieran	Hubieran servido	Hayan servido

- Subjunctive is usually used to express wishes, wants and hopes. And it is usually introduced by the words: que, ojalá, espero (que), si, cuando.
- The present form is used to express we hope something or someone works as expected in the present time or near future: Espero que mi opinión sirva (I hope my opinion works).

- The imperfect preterit form is used to mention the function that something or someone could have, also to express our wish to be served a certain food: Ojalá nos sirvieran postres (if only they serve desserts)
- The pluperfect is used to talk about a function that something or someone could probably have acquired if a certain situation had happened: tu dinero hubiera servido para pagar la cuenta (your money had been useful to pay the check).
- The perfect preterit form is used to introduce the consequence when someone or something has got a function. For example: avísenme cuando haya servido la comida (Let me know once you have served the food).

Let's review a bit the Imperative Mode:

We usually use the imperative mode to give some pieces of advice or, mainly, to give orders. Don't forget, this mode does not have tenses.

Subject	Imperative
Tú (you)	Sirve
Usted (you: formal)	Sirva
Nosotros (we)	Sirvamos
Ustedes (you: plural)	Sirvan

- Sirvamos el almuerzo (let's serve the lunch)
- Sirvan para algo (Please, be useful in something)
